

HOTEL LOBBY GLEANINGS

CHARLTON ANDREWS, AN INDIANA AUTHOR, IN THE CITY.

He Will Spend the Summer at Brookville, and Write Another Book—Hotel Visitors.

Charlton Andrews, the author of "A Parson's Gentle Knight," and also well known as a translator of Paul Verlaine's poems, is spending a few days in Indianapolis, visiting literary friends. Mr. Andrews is originally from Connersville but is now a resident of California, where he has a country place near Pasadena, known as "Ardenswood." In speaking of himself Mr. Andrews said yesterday: "I returned to Indiana, and, although my stay is temporary, yet it is indefinite, owing to a serious and protracted illness in my wife's family, who reside in Brookville, Ind. I have done nothing in a literary way since my book appeared. While in California I have been ranching it. On the whole, I feel that I have lost nothing during that time, as I have been building up physically for my future work. There have been some newspaper rumors that I am about to publish a novel based on Colorado life. This is not true. I had a story of about 30,000 words, I burned the manuscript, wrote it in a sixty-thousand-word form, burned it again and obliterated it from my mind. I expect to spend the summer in Brookville, where, in its picturesque influence, both in nature and history, I expect to grind out a story based on the American revolution—a much-trodden field from which to glean literary inspiration, but one of which I am very fond and believe well suited to my purpose. In fact, I already have a start of 20,000 words. It has been more than a year since I have been in Indianapolis, and coming back calls to me the loss of my good friend, Robley W. Stephenson, who died last year. You know he attained a national reputation writing those little paragraphs in the Journal under the name of Captain Quibbles in the Air. He was a critic, philosopher and humorist. There should be a collection of his best things in book form for circulation. The money derived from the sale of the book could be used to provide a stone, appropriate to his memory, on his grave at Terre Haute. I would be willing to undertake this compilation purely for the record for the benefit of his work, which in a permanent form would live on."

BACK FROM WESTERN TRIP.

Dr. F. W. Hays and Henry W. Lawrence Reach the City.

Henry W. Lawrence, manager of the Hotel English, and Dr. Franklin W. Hays returned yesterday from a trip through Colorado and New Mexico. They spent about a month in the West and Southwest. They were accompanied by George G. Tanner, who remained in Colorado Springs with Mrs. Tanner, who joined him there. Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Tanner went West with the hope of gaining robust health. Mr. Lawrence came back in fine health and spirits and it is announced that Mr. Tanner also received great benefits from the trip. The Indians found things on a general basis wherever they went. In Colorado there was special activity, the people being enthusiastic about mining prospects. They seem to have forgotten that "free silver" was an issue and as a matter of fact little attention was paid to this hobby in Colorado after 1880. At Colorado Springs Mr. Lawrence was specially interested in a handsome European hotel called "The Butlers." The house is run by a French manager and the waiters are of Swiss nationality. The men that composed the party have mining interests in the West.

A Confederate Visitor.

William Almon, of Nashville, an ex-Confederate soldier, was in town recently looking after some matters in connection with the Printer's Hotel at Colorado Springs. While here Almon was taken over to the monument by one of his acquaintances and admired the shaft greatly. He was asked to place his name on the register, and when he did so the man in charge asked: "What regiment, comrade?" "I was on the other side," remarked Almon. However, the fact that he was "the other side" did not keep him from enjoying the monument, and those in charge showed him the greatest courtesy. Almon also visited the Statehouse, and the old battle flags—that he may have shot at—were pointed out to him.

R. B. Hanna Optimistic.

R. B. Hanna, one of the active and leading young Republicans of Allen county, was here from Fort Wayne yesterday. He is decidedly optimistic over the present situation in his district, and thinks that the Republican nominee for Congress stands an excellent chance of being elected. Mr. Hanna made the race for Congress against Herndon Robinson two years ago and was defeated by about 600 votes. He says Allen county is about 2,000 Democratic and figures that the Republicans will materially reduce this majority. "If we reduce this majority a thousand," he said, "we would elect the Republican nominee for Congress, provided he kept up with the county ticket, and there is no reason why he should not do so."

Has Accepted the Call.

Rev. Owen D. Odell, of Dubuque, Ia., who is at the Denison Hotel with his wife and daughter, is here to hold Easter services in the Second Presbyterian Church to-night. Mr. Odell has decided to accept the call to this church, but has not formally tendered his resignation to the church at Dubuque. He will return home early this week with the intention of coming to Indianapolis later.

IS YAWNING CONTAGIOUS?

A CAREFUL OBSERVER RELATES CURIOUS INCIDENTS.

His Theory Is that if One Person in a Crowd Yawns the Rest Will Follow Suit.

"See that man stifling a yawn?" said the man who takes an interest in curious little things in his neighborhood. "Well, keep your eyes open and see what happens." The man who had unlimbered his jaws was sitting with three or four hundred others in a stuffy little church where a masculine-looking female severely clothed in black was holding forth on the subject of "The Predilection of the Filian Toward the Softening Influences of Christianity." The talk was dreary and wearisome enough, but hardly so depressing as to account for the maxillary manifestations that followed the initial yawn.

One by one gloved hands went lazily up all over the house to cover the undue display of dental furniture. Dozens of bored listeners to the right and left of the man who first spread his jaws sought relief in wood, wax, and stoneware yawns. Dozens more in front and behind the pioneer yawner broadly one after another. In a few minutes the epidemic died away as quickly as it came.

STREET-CAR INCIDENT.

"I was on a North Side street car the other day with a friend when I happened to think of this very thing. I turned to my companion, and for want of a better subject to gossip about, I told him pretty much what I am telling you. He scoffed at the idea, said I must have been carried away by a coincidence or even by what Edward Everett Hale calls a 'coincidence of the third order.' But I knew I was right. To prove the thing I tried a practical demonstration. 'Now,' I said to him, 'watch what follows.'"

"I know a man-spirited man who ruined an oratorical effort one night by starting an epidemic of jaw-stretching. This person went on one occasion to hear a speaker for whom he had a particular dislike. The man who was to talk was very vain and well as very brilliant, and kept close watch on his audience to see how they were touched by his slyly eloquent. He was of the sort that encouragement spurs and the slightest discouragement casts down utterly for the time being. Well, this man-spirited man, in the midst of the orator's most brilliant flow of words, leaned back in his chair and stretched his jaws.
